<sup>2</sup> 1 Chron. 1:43-50 title - The kings of Edom: That these are descendants of Esau is assumed by commentators, but not specifically stated by ancestral linkage in the text. Elsewhere, Edom and Esau are said to be identical, e.g. Gen. 25:30; 36:1,8,19,43.

<sup>3</sup> 1 Chron. 1:51-54 title - The chiefs of Edom: Note that these are specifically stated to be descendants of Esau in Gen. 36:40-43.

<sup>5</sup> 1 Chron. 2:21 - Hezron: For reasons unknown to us, Hezron at age 60 married the daughter of Machir, presumably to raise up posterity for Machir, who may have had no sons (2:21). These descendants were then counted as the sons of Machir (2:23), but included here in the list of the biological sons of Hezron.

<sup>6</sup> 1 Chron. 2:21 - Gilead: The reference to Gilead is either that (1) Machir was the principal inhabitant/warrior of the region of Gilead, and in need of male heirs to maintain control the region; or preferably, (2) after the arrangement with Hezron, Machir had a son whom he named Gilead, and the region was named after his unexpected male heir late in life.

<sup>11</sup> 1 Chron. 8:8-11 - Shaharaim: (His connection to the sons of Benjamin is unknown. Merrill, TBKC I, 601 suggests he = Ahishahar, 7:10, son of Bilhan, so the line is traced through Ashbel, 8:1, = Jediel, 7:10. Sons were born to him in Moab after divorcing his wives Hushim and Baara. Hodesh (2 Chron. 8:9) is a third wife. However, further reference is made to sons of Shaharaim and his prior wife Hushim (2 Chron. 8:11).
