1 Psalm 123 - This Song of Ascents was evidently composed to be sung en route to worship at the sanctuary in Jerusalem. The Psalmist was surrounded by those filled with contempt and scoffing. Thus, he directed his prayer upwards for grace. Franz Delitzsch (K&D) suggests a possible Maccabean setting, but absent proof, I leave it in a pre-exilic setting along with the preponderance of attributed psalms (122, 124, 131, 133 [David] and 127 [Solomon]).

Truthfully, contempt by surrounding nations has typically been Israel's lot. As of this writing (April, 2006), the call of the "Palestinian" Charter for Israel's extermination has never been withdrawn. The "Palestinians," the Muslim world at large, the pro-"Palestinian" European Union and United Nations all fit this category of those who are arrogantly contemptuous of God's chosen, albeit disobedient nation.

One of Israel's most vehement neighbors is Iran. Iran's new president, Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, on October 26, 2005, repeated a remark from a former ayatollah that Israel should be "wiped out from the map," insisting that a new series of attacks will destroy the Jewish state, and lashing out at Muslim countries and leaders that acknowledge Israel. 2 Psalm 123 Superscription - Song of Ascents: See note on Psalm 120.

3 Psalm 123:1 - enthroned: Literally "the one sitting in the heavens." Usually this word is translated "dwelling" or "abiding" or "living," but its root meaning is "to sit down." If one is sitting down, he is comfortable and at rest. NASB translators took it a step further to suggest that God has to be sitting on something, so since He is the Supreme Ruler, it must be a throne (see also NIV). Here, the AV is more customary – "thou that dwellest in the heavens."

   C1  Scoffing:  {4} Our soul is greatly filled With the scoffing of those who are at ease,
